What is a book? With e-readers, video on demand, and audio podcasts, our expectations for literature have changed dramatically. How do you build a book that works across media platforms making the great works of the past accessible to the technology of the future?

This is the goal of History... In Person! We are expanding the envelope for what a book can do in bringing science, art, history and literature to life through dynamic storytelling. Within the bindings of these books you can link to a 'live performance,' including video, text, audio and interactive lesson plans that bring you into the world of these great historical characters, allowing you to have an intimate encounter with some of the greatest minds in history.

Each medium offers different advantages that you can explore:

- The E-book has timelines and a bibliography for further reading.
- The Audio Book includes a dramatic interpretation of the text, music, and bonus tracks.
- The Video includes a 'live' performance.
- There are Lesson Plans for teachers and home-schoolers that integrate history and literature.

(This special offer ends November 25th. Flash drives will be delivered early in December.)

The following characters have been filmed, the text is edited, and audio book recorded. These History... In Person! books are in post-production, to be released in early November:

HISTORY: FOUR FRIENDS OF LINCOLN Fox portrays four different friends of Abraham Lincoln to give you a more intimate view of America's favorite president:
